Turnkey Fulfillment

Case Study :

Helping customers with packaging styles for the retail channels.

A national telecommunications company was launching a new accessory product into the retail market. This would be their first attempt at a packaging style completely unique to their existing product line. Concerns regarding launch date, manufacturability, and acceptances in the market place weighed heavily on the companies mind. Drawing on years of experience in design for manufacturing, we provided a packaging and tooling solution that would ease the processing time of assembly and the look of the product displayed within the package.

Since the release of the new packaging style, market acceptance has been high and existing product lines are being redesigned into this packaging platform.
